Mississippi Overflowing.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 6.—The river here is rising steadily at the rate of two inches in 24 hours. The weather is cloudy and threatening. The levees below here, as far down as Friar's Point, are still reported good, the only break being at the cut in the Old Town levee, through which water is pouring, threatening plantations below, from the rear. At St. Francis Almadon on the break had risen four feet at midnight last night, and was rising rapidly. Water comes from the Mississippi, at New Madrid, and threatens the fine cotton lands above Helena, on the Arkansas side. Cotton men predict a loss of 80,000 bales of cotton in Memphis district alone, from the present outlook. A letter from the mouth of White river, 25 miles below here, written on the fourth, says it will take a foot more to get one-half of the cotton outside of the levee, one-third of which is now in the water. Behind the levees we can stand three feet without damage. Corn was planted in low places and is now in the water and lost.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 6.—There is no change in the situation since the reports at noon. It is now within seven inches of the spring rise and within nine inches of the point which overflows the entire country on the Arkansas side, back to Madison, a distance of 40 miles.

The C. & A. route remains closed to through passenger travel at Wilmington, Ill., but before, the necessary repairs are made. No Chatsworth mail has been received since Monday. The first regular train on the Vandalia line will leave on time to-day, though a transfer will have to be made at the washout between Terre Haute and Indianapolis. The Chicago and Alton is now running through on the main line, Sangamon bridge having been repaired. The washout on the Indianapolis have been repaired and trains will go through to-day as usual. The discontent among travellers at Cairo, most of them are afraid to travel on the roads just repaired, on account of the soft condition of the road bed.

Sensational Reports of More Failures.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The Evening Post's financial article says Wall street stories are to-day clouded with rumors of a disquieting character. These all seem to emit from the Stock Exchange, and to be accompanied by speculative operations there. In a paper way the rumor is that three or four bankers are in trouble, and one or two steel firms. Back of the way stories are circulated, and all the surroundings, the inference is inevitable that they are simply the work of persons anxious to depress prices. Until absolute announcement of suspension, it will be safe to discredit the stories which may be set afloat that there are to be more failures.

An Illinois Convict fixes up a Story with which to Secure a Pardon.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The Times to-morrow will publish a statement obtained from a prisoner named Billy Forrester, who is serving out a term of ten years in the State penitentiary at Joliet for the crime of burglary. The statement is in substance that he (Forrester) is fully cognizant of the facts of the Nathan murder; that though he cannot point out the man who struck the blow, he can name the co-operators and cognizance of certain high officials in New York, to open the safe in the Nathan Mansion, and while making this attempt aroused Mr. Nathan, and between them, in order to escape, killed him with an iron dog, which they were using as a professional tool. He refuses to reveal the names of these parties, because he fears this will interfere with his plan of bringing them to justice, and of revenging himself on them for their persistent persecution of himself, should he secure a pardon, as he hopes to do, he will make this the object of his life. He affirms that the relatives of the murdered man had no knowledge of the way in which he came to his death, and he denies the truth of stories recently published in New York and elsewhere concerning the murder. Forrester is an old experienced burglar, and knows the surroundings of the Nathan house perfectly. He submitted diagrams in connection with this confession and otherwise displayed familiarity with the scene of the assassination. His confession is long and circumstantial. It implicates deeply some of the New York officials, but not by name.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 6.—Indications now are that McCreary has carried the State by from 5,000 to 8,000 more votes than for Leslie in 1871. The majority may reach 45,000. It is probable that the vote to call a constitutional convention is lost.

M., the whole square is one brand sheet of flames and over thirty thousand dollars worth of lumber is on fire. It is thought to have been fired by thieves and cracksmen, the advance guard of fullians going with Barnum's show, which exhibits here to-day, the evident object being to rob the town. The fire department is working with great energy to subdue the flames, and it is thought they will be able to keep it confined to one square, where it now is. There is no wind, else the destruction would be immense.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

A Squabble in the O'Connell Celebration.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A special dispatch from Dublin says: Secret meetings of the Amnesty Association Societies have been held in the interest of the national and international delegates to be represented in the demonstration to-morrow, and strong efforts have been made to induce the Lord Mayor's party to substitute Hon. Isaac Butt in place of Lord O'Hagan, as orator, who shall pronounce the eulogy upon O'Connell. A Home rule delegate would thus have been given the affair; but the efforts failed, and threats are made of interruption to Lord O'Hagan if he speaks.

DUBLIN, Aug. 6.—The O'Connell centenary celebration is continued to-day. The ceremonies began with a grand procession through the streets. This evening several banquets and balls will take place.

The Centennial in Dublin.

DUBLIN, Aug. 3.—The numerous organizations, civic and military, which were to take part in the procession to-day, began to assemble at an early hour this morning, in St. Stephen's Green and vicinity. It is estimated there were nearly 4,000 people in line. Houses and sidewalks along the line were crowded with dense masses of spectators. There was great cheering as the procession marched past O'Connell's house and the city hall, where the Lord Mayor delivered his first oration against the Union. The members of the Fenian Amnesty association marched with a banner at their head, hung with chains. Their flags were draped with crape and other emblems of mourning were displayed. Dr. Isaac Butt and other Irish members of parliament marched with the association. In Sackville street, as divisions of the procession, with bands playing, arrived and took up their positions, the scene was grand and stirring. Long before all had arrived, the commencement ceremonies at the base of the monument, Lord O'Hagan, who was to have delivered the oration, was not able to be present, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin came forward to read it to the assembled multitude. The moment he appeared there was a great roar and confusion. The Fenian amnesty men had moved up to the front of the platform, and as the Lord Mayor began to speak they shook the chains attached to their banners in his face and drowned his voice with shouts of "No Whiggery," and loud and continued cries for Dr. Butt. The mayor made a second attempt to read the speech, but finding it impossible to make himself heard withdrew from the platform and proceeded to his carriage under protection of the police. Dr. Butt, in response to repeated calls, came forward and made a speech, reviewing the career of O'Connell, thanking the people for their praiseworthy conduct during the day. He was enthusiastically received. Speeches were made by O'Connor Power, member of parliament for Mayo county, and Sullivan, member for Louth. The proceedings were then brought to a close and the vast assemblage peaceably dispersed. With the exception of the scene in front of the platform, there was no serious disturbance throughout the day. The sermon delivered by Dr. Coke yesterday is much admired for its eloquence, but is sharply criticised by liberal Catholics, for drawing anew an ultra montane line, which virtually excludes liberals from the church. The Dublin Mail says nine parts of the discourse was devoted to the church and one to O'Connell.

DUBLIN, August 6—Midnight.—A grand banquet, at which the lord mayor presided, was given at Exhibition Palace this evening. The proceedings were marked by no incident of importance outside of the regular toasts, viz: "The legislative independence of Ireland," was reached. This the mayor announced, and called on Charles Gavan Duffy to respond. Duffy on rising was greeted with a tremendous uproar and shouts for Butt for twenty minutes. There was a scene of wild disorder. The mayor made repeated attempts to gain a hearing, but in vain, and vacated the chair. Dr. Butt then rose and began to speak, when the cheering was extinguished, and the company dispersed in great confusion, and before the series of regular toasts was finished.

A YACHT VOYAGE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

The yacht Effort, sixteen tons, which arrived at St. John, N. B., on Saturday, was forty-nine days in crossing the Atlantic from Fleetwood, England. The only place touched was St. Mary's Bay, where the captain procured some eggs. The voyage was remarkable for squally weather. The yacht is fitted with two engines of six-horse power, working on the screw-shaft diagonally from either side. She is schooner rigged, with a square foresail, but was originally a sloop, and has one deck. She was constructed by Edward Kerr, in 1868, at Greenock. The cabin and engine-room extend nearly the whole length of the vessel. The outside planking is of pitch pine, and the timbers of oak. The Effort was brought out under sail, her screw being unshipped; there was no chronometer on board during the voyage, but her position was ascertained by lunar observations. Her steering apparatus consisted of a tiller, and those at the wheel found no difficulty in managing her. During the passage the yacht was subjected to all sorts of weather, and does not appear any the worse for it. In stormy weather she behaved better than in an ordinary chop, when she would jump about considerably. Her highest rate of speed was six knots an hour. The captain, who has held his certificate of master for eight years, says during the voyage he experienced rougher weather than ever he before met with.

THE FRENCH FLOODS EXPLAINED.—The clerical newspapers in France speculate on the causes of the great floods with some asperity. It appears that the Municipal Council of Toulouse refused to erect a statue to "the glorious and miraculous shepherdess of Pibrac," and one of the councillors said, "We prefer a fountain." Whereupon the Gazette de Nimes now remarks: "God has fulfilled the wish of those honorable councillors, and sent a fountain to the capital of Languedoc which they little expected. Had the town voted the required sum, Divine Providence," says the editor, "would never have treated Toulouse so severely." It is understood that the Bishop of Chartres is of the same opinion.

HIS FIRST SMOKE.—A boy tried his first pipe the other day. When his father came home to dinner, he found him braced against a barrel, with his legs spread apart, his hands and lower jaw drooping listlessly, and a deathly pallor overspreading his face. "What is the matter with you?" inquired the amazed parent. "My—teacher is—is sick," gasped the boy. "Well, you mustn't feel so badly about it, Tommy," said the father, kindly. "She will get well again, without a doubt." And then, stepping into the house, he observed to his wife that that was the most sympathetic boy he ever saw.

The Independent says: "Last week McPoland, of this county, was arrested on the charge of burning the barn of Jeremy Taylor, of Yamhill county, and was brought before Dr. Westfall, J. P. of West Chehalem, and examined, and was bound over in the sum of $1,000, and in default was locked up in the jail at Lafayette. T. B. Handley, his attorney, proposes to go to Salem this week and get out a writ of habeas corpus for McPoland's discharge from jail, on the ground of conspiracy against him by certain parties who wish to get possession of his stock."

Jeanne Deveze, a French servant girl, while in a condition of religious hallucination recently, threw herself on her master's furnace and was roasted to death. She desired, as she often said, to imitate the legend of Sainte Colombe, who threw herself on a furnace when in the act of making bread, and whose soul evolved in the form of a dove and alighted on the spire of a church at Rome.

Harvest hands are in great demand in Yamhill, Linn and Douglas counties.

They have a man living near Vancouver who brings hay to that market and is in the habit of getting one or two young men to get upon a load of hay, and then he covers them nicely with loose hay and drives to the scales and gets his load weighed and drives to the barn of the purchaser. On his way thither the young men concealed crawl out and off, thus making a difference of two or three hundred pounds on each load.

ANOTHER GREAT RAILWAY WAR IN PROSPECT.

The Chicago Tribune of July 28th says:

There is another railroad war in prospect which promises to exceed in magnitude the one between the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroads just closed. The battle this time will be mainly between the St. Louis and Kansas City Roads, but there is hardly a doubt that all the Western lines, including those of Chicago, will be compelled to take a hand in it before long. The ball was opened a few days ago by the St. Louis, Kansas City & Northern Railroad giving orders to withdraw all coupon tickets from the Missouri Pacific Railroad. The Missouri Pacific struck back by making a reduction both in freight and passenger rates. Yesterday the Hannibal & St. Joe took a hand in the fight by reducing its rates to New York nearly one-half. Mr. Jay Gould is at the bottom of all this trouble, ever since he secured control of the St. Louis, Kansas City & Northern and the Kansas Pacific, Railroads to form a through line from St. Louis to California. Formerly the Missouri Pacific carried the bulk of the California traffic, and now that it was transferred to the St. Louis, Kansas City & Northern, it had to look out for other connections to reach the far West, as it could no longer take its through traffic over the Kansas Pacific. It therefore turned an eye toward the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, with which it made arrangements for carrying its through traffic as soon as completed to Kansas City. What the next move of Mr. Gould will be is to drive the Missouri Pacific to the wall and thus secure a monopoly on the St. Louis traffic to Omaha is hard to tell, but his action in ordering that the coupon tickets be thrown out from the offices on the line of the road shows that the fight will be a fierce one. Several roads, and among them the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, are now extending their lines to Kansas City, so as to be enabled to take part in the conflict. This war will work very detrimentally to the Iowa pool lines which lead from this city to Omaha. It will be impossible for them to maintain rates to Missouri River points when the lines from St. Louis and other Western cities are cutting them down as low as possible.

INLAID OR MOSAIC WORK.—A very ingenious method of making inlaid or mosaic work in wood has lately been introduced. Two contrasting kinds of veneer, say bird's-eye maple and black walnut, are laid one on the other, and confined between the covers of white wood of something similar. The desired design is then cut through the whole by a fine jig-saw, hardly larger than a horse-hair. The part that is cut out of the light-colored veneer is then set into the place of the corresponding part in the dark veneer, and vice versa, and glued firmly upon the article to be ornamented, in the usual manner of veneering.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF THE AMERICAN REVIVALISTS IN LONDON.

[London Post, July 13.]

A final conference between Messrs. Moody and Sankey and ministers of religion took place yesterday afternoon in Mildmay Park Conference Hall. Mr. Thomas Stone, Chairman of the Central Committee, presided. The body of the large hall, which seats about 3,000, was reserved for the clergy and ministers; the side seats and galleries were chiefly occupied by the wives and daughters of the ministers. It was stated that there were about 700 ministers present, and that of these 188 were of the Church of England. The meeting having been opened with praise and prayer, Mr. Moody said that during the whole of the crowded meetings they had had on the 125 days they had been preaching in London he was glad to say that not one single accident had occurred.

The Rev. Dr. Bonner, of Glasgow, after expressing the pleasure it gave him of being permitted to be present on this occasion, and having witnessed the great work accomplished in London, said he felt constrained to bear his testimony to the marvelous and blessed results which had attended the labors of the revivalists throughout the whole United Kingdom. He wished, however, to speak more particularly of the lasting results which were now being witnessed in Glasgow. There had been gathered into the churches there no less than 9,000 souls, who were now under the immediate supervision of the ministers.

The Rev. Mr. Billing, of Holy Trinity, Islington, in the course of his observations, said that, with all the success which had been seen, it would be premature to attempt to form an estimate of the results. There was not a night now but what good fruit was being gathered from the work at the Agricultural Hall. He believed that the real work for the ministers had hardly yet begun.

The Rev. Canon Conway said that before he took any part in the movement he first asked himself was there any Bible precedent for welcoming two unordained preachers. He found there was. He saw a parallel in the case of St. Paul and Apollos. Like Mr. Moody, Apollos was one who felt that he must go out and preach, and in the course of his travels they read that Apollos came across the footsteps of Paul, and so they read that while Paul planted, Apollos watered, and God gave the increase. Well, when he saw that precedent, and when he found as he did the brethren from Edinburgh and Glasgow writing to the brethren here in London and asking them to receive these two honored servants of the Lord, he felt it was his duty to do so. His personal testimony was this, that many, very many of the higher classes had been blessed through their mission, and he trusted that the blessing of God would follow them wherever they went.

The Rev. Robert Wilson, of Craven Street Chapel; the Rev. Thomas Richardson, of the East End; the Rev. Mr. Taylor, Presbyterian, of West Dulwich; Dr. Jobson, the Rev. Mr. Clowes, Mr. Henry Varley, the Rev. W. H. Aitken and Lord Shaftesbury also bore testimony to the excellent results of the work performed by the Evangelists.

Mr. Moody said that as the time had now arrived for them to say farewell, he, in compliance with numerous requests, would ask Mr. Sankey to sing the hymn, "There were ninety and nine."

Mr. Sankey, who was very visibly affected, said that before he sang this hymn in England for the last time he sincerely wished to thank all the many friends they had met here. He hoped too that they would all meet again in using these beautiful hymns where there would be no more parting and no more breaking up. He then sang with great tenderness and feeling, but was so much affected that his voice nearly failed him at every verse.

Mr. Moody, in taking his final farewell, was also much affected. All he could do was to say that he sincerely thanked the ministers and friends for receiving them so kindly. The kindness of the committee had completely broken his heart. He wished to thank the stewards, the reporters, and the press generally for their kindness. He had made many mistakes and committed faults, but none had been unkind to him. He also wished to thank all the workers. The policemen, too, he must thank for the assistance they had rendered, and the kind way in which they had done it. He concluded by asking them to sing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow." He then suddenly quitted the platform, evidently determined to avoid an ovation. There was a rush to the anterooms to shake hands with him, but he seemed to leave left with the utmost rapidity, for it was immediately announced that he was gone.

A proposal was made to raise a subscription to present Messrs. Moody and Sankey with a testimonial.

The Chairman of the Committee said that such a proposition, he knew, would be most hurtful to the revivalists, and it must not be proceeded with.

The proceedings then closed with the benediction.

ALARMING PANIC AT A MOODY AND SANKEY MEETING.

The London Standard of July 9th has the following: "A most alarming panic occurred at the meeting held yesterday in connection with the Moody and Sankey services at Camberwell Hall. The time for the departure of the revivalists drawing near, the audiences are daily on the increase. Last night the hall was densely crowded more than an hour before the commencement of the proceedings; still thousands arrived, only to find the doors closed against them. Mr. Moody commenced the service nearly an hour before the usual time. A hymn had been sung and a prayer offered up, and Mr. Moody was engaged reading the Fifty-first Psalm, when suddenly the whole of the audience was startled by the noise of doors being forced, and the uproar of thousands endeavoring to rush into the building. The females present shrieked, and a riot seemed to threaten. Mr. Moody immediately concluded his reading and requested the people to keep calm and to join in singing a hymn. The meeting was now left in charge of Mr. Sankey, while Mr. Moody left the rostrum with the intention of endeavoring to quiet the people outside. He, on seeing the state of affairs, returned and told the ushers to depart from the usual rule and allow as many as could be accommodated to stand in the aisles. The doors having been opened, thousands burst in, many rushing toward the galleries. The people here became alarmed, and Mr. Moody, who had returned, was asked not to allow any more to come there, or some evil consequence might ensue. In the meantime, a panic spread among those who had crowded into the inquiry rooms, which are situated under the platform and galleries. They were terrified lest these structures should give way, and the crowds of people above fall down upon them. Mr. Moody mounted into the rostrum, and expressed the hope that all would remain quiet. There had been a report of a threatened riot underneath. He was sorry to say that many people had got into the inquiry rooms, and had so far forgotten themselves as to use violence. Under these circumstances, many were trying to get outside, but it was no use, as there were thousands in the rooms underneath and around the building. Consequently, if those below did not leave, violence must be met by violence. It would be injudicious for people to faint, too, for they could not be removed; so every one would do well to remain where they were. Mr. Moody then left the rostrum. The panic now reached its height. Numbers of women, in spite of all remonstrance, endeavored to leave, and many had to be kept in their places by sheer force. Mr. Graham, one of the chief stewards, entered the rostrum and said if the people did not keep calm the committee could not now be responsible either for the safety of the building or people. Mr. Moody had gone outside, and would not return until all was quiet. Either the people in the rooms underneath or the galleries above would have to retire, or the service would at once be concluded. In about half an hour the overwhelming crowd had considerably lessened, and, after provision had been made for some extra hearers, the service proceeded. No casualty occurred, although the majority were severely crushed, and a number fainted. Mr. Moody, in the course of his subsequent observations, remarked that he was very sorry to hear that two ladies who were present a few nights previously were now no more, one having dropped dead after leaving the hall."

TO PATRONS OF OREGON.

BRO. GRANGERS: "Granger," in the OREGONIAN of June 23d, and "Patron," of July, had their say, and invited discussion. Now I wish not only to give my views in relation to the principles that should govern the business relations of the order, but show what I have done toward securing their adoption. As a visitor at the State Grange convened at Salem last year, I carefully noticed their action in regard to business organization. The subject was referred to a committee of five, under the head of transportation and co-operation. I was consulted in the matter. A full plan was drawn up providing for a State council, elected by district councils, to take charge of all the business of the order, with the right of appeal from their decisions to the executive committee. The report also contained instructions for incorporating the order, districting the State, etc., and perfecting the organization. I learned that the report was adopted, with a slight alteration, not affecting the representative principle, but not being published in the proceedings, I am unable to give particulars. I was much pleased, and expected soon to hear of steps taken to carry out its provisions. Nothing was done until the meeting of the executive committee in November, when I heard hints of an intention on their part to adopt their present plan, taking direct charge themselves. I was alarmed, because it was directly contrary to the principle adopted by the State Grange embodied in the report of the committee, without sanction of law, and must tend to create jealousies and divisions. At the close of their session I learned that the deed was done, and under the excitement of the moment, without time for reflection or consultation, picked up an old handbill and wrote on the back the following short article, under the head of "An important question," in substance and fact as I was finishing it our worthy Master, Daniel Clark came along. I called his attention and read it to him. He thanked me kindly, wished me to note what might occur to me on the subject during his short absence, and to give him what I had written. I did so—folded it up, and he put it in his pocket. Here it is:

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Is it right for our executive committee to form itself into a great financial corporation, with legal power to control our organization, with nothing to prevent them from individually buying up the stock and becoming a monopoly in our midst, and beyond our control? Will our order admit the idea of incorporating in separate granges, and then, as a whole place so great a power in the hands of the executive committee, from whose decision there is no appeal? Is it wise? Is it not have to be more than men to render it prudent to place the judicial and financial power in their hands? This is a momentous question, and it cannot be doubted that the executive committee can only act with safety as a supervising power

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING AUGUST 7 1875.

COURT AND BAR

The letter of Charles O Conor on the subject of the decision of the New York Court of Appeals in the case of Boss Tweed, has opened up an animated discussion among the Eastern papers, as to the propriety of public criticisms of judicial decisions by members of the legal profession Some of the papers endeavor to maintain that the decisions of the higher courts ought not to be made the subject of review by the lawyers, and seem to consider the action of Mr O'Conor altogether out of place while others insist that the judicial decisions of the country are as clearly within the scope of legitimate public discussion as any other subjects, and that the members of the legal profession, being presumably the best qualified, are the fittest persons to engage in such discussion.

The relations of the bar to the bench are such as to make any discussion of the decisions of the courts by them a delicate matter, but they are, in most cases, the only class of persons who can properly discuss them Mr O Conor's letter charges, by the strongest implication, that in its decision of Tweed's case the Court of Appeals was influenced by improper considerations, and for that he is certainly subject to censure Unless he has evidence of improper conduct such as would amount to malfeasance, he, an eminent member of the bar, above all other persons, should refrain from the use of language implying want of integrity in the court, and if he does possess such evidence, the charge should be made directly and not by innuendo, Reflections on the integrity or purity of the bench, are a thing not to be tolerated unless they are backed by facts sufficient to establish guilt with reasonable certainty. But beyond this the restriction upon criticism of judicial decisions can not be allowed to extend The rulings of the courts of last resort are of little less authority than the statutes passed by the legislatures They are the interpretations of the statutes, and are of as high public concern as statutes themselves, and their correctness, their propriety, their effect, in short all their features, are as proper subjects of discussion, of review, of criticism, by the bar, by the newspapers, by the people at large, as the statutes, or the nominees for Congress And yet there are considerations which suggest that a style of discussion, which might not be out of place if addressed to some other subject would be highly objectionable if it related to judicial decisions In this lies the fault of Mr O'Connor's performance He might rightfully review the Tweed decision, though it emanated from the highest court of the State, but he could not rightfully treat the matter as he might be permitted to treat a caucus of politicians

DOES GOLD FLUCTUATE?

The attentive reader could not have failed to note the fluctuations that have taken place in the money market, in connection with heavy commercial transactions at various times within the last year or two A bank doing a very large business suspends, or there is a corner in Wall street, gold, according to the reports goes up The bank resumes or the corner is turned, gold settles back to its old figures A remarkable instance of this sympathy between the currency and the financial affairs of individuals, was shown recently in the case of the suspension of Duncan, Sherman & Co, on the announcement of which, gold was reported to have leaped up some four or five per cent instantaneously

The truth is, gold did not advance, as reported Gold is intrinsically valuable, and is by common consent the standard by which other values are measured, the world over Gold never budged when Duncan, Sherman & Co failed It was the American irredeemable greenback and the national bank note redeemable with the irredeemable greenback whose value was changed The reports said gold had jumped up several cents, but that was the conventional way of saying greenbacks had settled down several cents It is this valueless paper, upon which the government stamped a nominal value as an expediency in the midst of a great crisis, that gets panicked with every unexpected event in the gold room A hundred gold dollars would have bought just as much goods of any description, in any country where gold is the current money just after the Duncan Sherman & Co failure as it would have purchased just before that event The purchasing power of gold remained unmoved, but the purchasing power of greenbacks, which is wholly dependent on a fictitious value, sank down like the pulse of a patient suffering under congestive chills

This unsteady value of the circulating medium is one of the most serious evils of the greenback Through it a branch of business is maintained which is a tax and a burden to the community, and which has no place in legitimate trade We refer to the business of buying and selling greenbacks as we have it on this coast, and of buying and selling gold as they have it at the East A system of finances in which the money of the country is divided into two classes having values so different and relative values so variable that a regular brokerage business can be carried on in exchanging one money for the other can not be a sound system

UNDER WHICH KING?

A gentleman who was present at the Democratic ratification meeting at Salem the other day, informs us the speakers did not offer any remarks on the question of repudiating the national debt In that respect they differ from their party in Ohio, for there that is the main question Pendleton's plan of paying off the debt with greenbacks, which are only promises and the general proposition to flood the country with irredeemable paper are about all there is in Eastern politics and on both of these the Ohio Democracy takes the affirmative

It may be thought that the situation and circumstances of the two sections of the republic are so different that Democracy may mean rag money in Ohio and cash money in Oregon, without any real inconsistency but it must be borne in mind the present contest in Oregon is a contest for member of Congress How will Ohio Democracy and Oregon get along together in Congress? Will they range themselves in opposing ranks on this vital question? And if they do will both be equally entitled to be considered sound Democrats? Or will Lafayette Lane if elected go over to the repudiationists and inflationists, and ruinationists of Ohio, and disgrace Oregon in the House as she has been disgraced in the Senate by having a vote recorded in favor of the indefinite increase of the volume of inconvertible paper to circulate in place of money This is a subject on which the people would, no doubt be glad to hear what the Democratic orators have to say

The Washington Chronicle states that before the president would consent to the removal of Fisher the ring district attorney of Washington whom Pierrepont insisted on removing, he actually called a cabinet meeting and submitted the subject to the whole cabinet Worse and worse

Some time in June a committee of the Connecticut Legislature reported a bill conferring the right of suffrage on women? On the 21st of July the bill was indefinitely postponed by the house of representatives

The circuit court at Chicago, on July 24 gave a decree directing O H Horton receiver of the Great Western Telegraph Company to sell the property of the concern by auction Oct 1st

The Germans of Ohio appear to be falling into line in the Republican party Many who were always before known as Democrats, refuse to support the rag money party

The shipping report in the Hongkong (China) Times of July 1, shows twenty steamers and eighty-one sailing vessels then at that port nearly all foreign vessels

CITY.

BEAUTIFUL COLTS—While passing along Stark street yesterday, our attention was attracted to quite a gathering which we found on inspection to be composed of admirers of horse flesh examining a family of Hambletonian colts four two-year olds and one yearling They belonged to different gentlemen of this city and vicinity, and were a person asked to select one from their number it would be a rather difficult matter, owing to their uniform beauty and majestic appearance One of them, a two-year old filly, belonging to Wm Sherlock, Esq., weighed 958 pounds two years from the day it was foaled, and all are large and graceful. With the strain of trotting blood that courses their veins, together with the trotting points they show, if some of these beautiful colts do not make a record on the turf the opinion of experts goes for nothing Two of them, belonging to Dr Hawthorne, a two-year old and a yearling, can be seen at Bacon's stable, and are well worth a visit from admirers of that noble animal—the horse

FOR SITKA—This evening at 7 o clock the O S S Co's steamship California will sail for Sitka and intermediate ports There will be quite a number on board from the military headquarters of this department. Lieut. Boyle and wife—Lieut. Boyle goes to Sitka on business connected with the Indian affairs of this department, and will be absent for some time Col Wood goes upon general business connected with the department. The colonel will be accompanied by his wife as far as Victoria. Col Bachelder has business connected with the quartermaster department, while Major Kress, of the ordnance bureau, will make an inspection tour for the department. Capt Joslyn, Lieut Moore and Lieut. Williams, with 40 enlisted men of the 21st infantry, will proceed as far as Fort Wrangel and garrison that post, which has by recent order been re-established It is expected that Rev. E. P Hammond and wife will get on board at some of the Sound ports, and proceed to Sitka and back for rest and recreation.

OREGON LEATHER.—It is a pleasure at any time to call attention to Oregon products of manufactures Yesterday our attention was called to a lot of harness leather manufactured by Lennenweber & Co, of Astoria, and to be seen at the harness store of J. F. Clark It consists of fifty sides, clean and free from cents and bandier, well finished, and, as experts declare equal to the very best of eastern brands. If the foregoing is a sample of what Oregon can produce we can see no reason why she should not be able to supply the home demand, and at the same time furnish an article for export If the rawhides that are sent away every week to San Francisco were worked up here they would furnish employment to a large number of people and add materially to the wealth of the State.

AT THE BONEYARD—The O S N Co. have quite a fleet of vessels at the boneyard that are laid up in ordinary undergoing repairs, being broke up and new ones that are fast approaching completion The old barge Nez Perce Chief, and the two large new ones, Autocrat and Columbia, are there waiting the time when the new crop of wheat begins to move, when they will be again called into requisition There are also the steamers Onward, Jane Mosier, Annie Stewart and the two new light draught boats, Orient and Occident, the first of these is nearly complete and ready for business, they are both light draught boats and are intended for the Upper Willamet. They will be ready for work before the present crop of wheat begins to move.

MAN KILLED—From the Evening Journal we gather the following: This morning a man came to this city from Oswego to purchase a coffin Upon inquiring we learned that the coffin was intended for a man who had been working for the contractor building a road from Oswego to the iron works, and was killed last evening by a rock falling on his head from the top of a bank near which he was employed, crushing his skull and killing him instantly. This one accident came near furnishing another For about three consecutive hours we tramped about the city to learn the deceased's name, together with other particulars, all to no avail, notwithstanding we questioned every man in town who had been to Oregon City during his life.

MINING IN SOUTHERN OREGON—The Jacksonville Sentinel of the 30th ult. says: Dr. J. B. Pilkington, of Portland president of the Oregon Quartz Mill and Mining Company, and Mr Jay G Kelly, the superintendent, were both in town this week. They showed us some of the finest specimens of polybasic silver ore we ever saw The ledge was discovered by Mr. Kelly in Josephine county. On the top of the ground it is about a foot wide The ores richer than Washoe, and it is equal to the best we have ever seen from the White Pine. It assays upward of $2,500 per ton, being nearly pure silver mixed with a little gold"

THE EXCURSION TO ASTORIA—The Hayward arrived at Astoria at 5 o clock yesterday morning with the excursionists from this city, some time after the mail steamer left so that nothing relating to her voyage could be sent by that means It is not likely she will leave until daybreak this morning on the return trip, consequently the excursionists may not be expected until about 10 o'clock.

OPEN AIR MEETING.—To-morrow afternoon there will be an open air meeting in front of Ladd & Tilton's Bank, corner of First and Stark streets. Singing will commence at 3 o'clock, from the Song Evangel There will be several short addresses, after which the people will adjourn to the Young Men's Association rooms and hold a meeting for praise and testimony

NIMRODS.—This evening Quimby, of the Exchange, Perkins, of the St. Charles, George Jones, Chas Prindle, John Fargo and Mr Plummer start for the Tualatin river, for the purpose of having a little recreation in hunting the deer, with which that section of country abounds About Monday next there will probably be a full supply of game in the market

VACATION—Rev D J Pierce has been granted two weeks vacation by the church over which he presides, and we understand that he is improving it by doing the work of his fellow laborer at Salem, the Rev Addison Jones who is at present confined to his bed, and it is considered very doubtful whether he will ever get up again

CHINESE POLITICS—Yesterday a couple of Chinese women, who have fallen into Mexican people's ways had a good square knock-down at the corner of Yamhill and Second streets. They stood up square to the work and struck right out from the shoulder affording a good deal of amusement to the lookers-on

THE POSTOFFICE—Nearly all the necessary tables desks and other furniture for the new postoffice are in place, and in a few weeks the work of removing from the old quarters in the Masonic Temple to the new and convenient apartments at the custom house will Begin

TO BE REPAIRED—It is the intention of the Baptist society in this place to have their church thoroughly repaired, and repainted out

SHOALWATER BAY EXCURSION.

ANNUAL REGATTA OF THE SHOALWATER BAY YACHT CLUB.

The annual regatta of the Shoalwater Bay Club was made the occasion of a pleasure excursion by the steamer Gussie Telfair, from Portland, and at the hour of 8 o'clock, Monday evening, the 2d inst., the steamer left the wharf and steamed down the river with about 35 passengers on board. Capt. Gardiner was in command, and Johnny Carney as purser, and both as well as Mr. Frank Hobin, the steward, were attentive as could be to every want of the passengers. We reached Astoria Tuesday morning at an early hour, and left about six o'clock for the bar of the Columbia and the "lordly" Pacific. The water both on the bar and the open sea was quite smooth, more so said that experienced navigator, Geo. Weidler, than he had seen it for "fifty years." Only a half dozen or so of the passengers were at all sea-sick, and those only such as kept their rooms or took too much breakfast. One dyspeptic individual ate a hearty breakfast just after crossing the bar, and though he had "been storm-bound in a man-of-war off Cape Hatteras for twenty days, and wasn't seasick a minute," he paid involuntary tribute to Neptune on this occasion, and his hearty breakfast was a dead loss to the ship. A lady and child were also quite sick in their rooms, as was a certain doctor who had come down from the heated regions of Walla Walla to enjoy the cooling breezes of old ocean, and cooling breezes they were; but we thought the doctor didn't enjoy them much, as he had forgotten to provide himself with an overcoat before starting. He was not the only one on board who had not thought that a five hours' ride might take us to a climate where something would be needed more than straw hats, linen coats and ice. By the way, our good ship was amply provided with ice, the purser having laid in enough for five such trips, and Geo. Weidler having duplicated the order so there would be sure to be enough, and when we got out to sea, Tuesday morning, Mr. Weidler was trying to swap ice for blankets, and, but for his temperance proclivities, would have exchanged a few hundred pounds for a reasonable quantity of something better calculated to counteract the influence of the cold northwesters.

SHOALWATER BAY,

Which we entered at 12 o'clock Tuesday, has been often described, as well as the oyster business, which constitutes the principal trade of the people who live here. The bay is entered by vessels of almost any class desiring, and when we came in the entrance was as smooth as the open sea and about five fathoms of water on the bar. Once inside the bay is calm as an inland lake, and is really a beautiful sheet of water.

OYSTERVILLE

Is situated about 13 miles up the bay from the entrance. It is quite a thriving place and has a fine site, but labors under the disadvantage of having no deep water near shore, so that the Telfair was compelled to anchor about four miles from the town, and the passengers were taken ashore in small boats. Oysterville has two good hotels and several business houses, all of which seemed to be doing well. The place, with more improvement, would make a splendid summer resort. It can be reached in one day from Portland, by steam or by boat to Unity and thence by stage. On the occasion of our visit the town was filled with visitors who were drawn together to witness the

SIXTH ANNUAL REGATTA OF THE SHOALWATER BAY YACHT CLUB.

The club has a thorough organization, its officers being I. A. Clark, president; John Crellin, commodore; H. K. Stevens, secretary, and all understand and faithfully perform the duties of their respective positions.

The regatta on this occasion was the most successful one the club has ever held, and we doubt if, in point of interest, in time made, harmony of action and excitement during the contest on the part of the spectators it has ever been surpassed on the coast. The business by which many of the people at Shoalwater Bay are engaged renders it necessary for them to have a great many boats, and the fleet of small craft which one always sees on the beach at Oysterville outnumbers that seen anywhere else on the northwest coast. Eight of the best of these boats were entered in the regatta, but only seven contested for the prizes, the eighth, Grey Eagle, named by Captain John Brown, having been called to Bruceport at the time of the race. The entries which sailed were as follows:

Mary M. Soule, commanded by Captain Alfonso Soule.
Minerva, by Captain J. H. Whitcomb.
Serena, by Captain Charles Finely.
Lib. Smith, by Captain James Johnston.
Artemisia, by Captain E. G. Loomis.
Humming Bird, by Captain Thomas Crellin.
Mary V. Marion, by Captain Dick Marion.

The course sailed over was from Oysterville across the bay, thence up to a point nearly opposite Bruceport, thence around the stake boat to the place of beginning, the distance to be sailed being estimated at 24 miles, including tacks.

The weather was everything that could be desired for boats of the size and build of those engaged in the contest to show their speed, the only exception that perhaps ought to be made is in the case of Capt. Crellin's Humming Bird, which was much shorter of keel and carried so much less canvass than the other boats that it was thought she would have come out better had the breeze not been so stiff. For every other purpose the breeze was said by all to be just right for good sailing, though to a "land lubber," the white caps over the surface of the bay looked just a little rough.

At the time of starting a great many spectators had boarded the Telfair, among whom were many citizens of Oysterville, who, together with the excursionists, crowded her decks. The starting point was two miles toward shore from where the steamer lay, and the boats could all be seen plainly. At one o'clock P. M. a gun was fired on shore and the fleet, which were in line, weighed anchor and moved forward a short distance before the wind. Once under headway the speed was soon rapidly increased until the several boats sped onward, dashing the spray high in air and presenting a most beautiful and exciting scene. Sailing a short distance toward the head of the bay, the fleet took a tack across, running just under the stern of the Telfair, so that those on board had a near and splendid view of all the boats as they passed. The steamer raised her anchor and followed, through able to keep up only by taking a straight course, while the boats were tacking. The Telfair came to anchor at the designated turning point and served the purpose of a stake-boat. The course, so far, had been almost in the face of the wind, and the whole fleet had sailed perhaps full sixteen miles, but as they made the tack across under the bow of the steamer, they caught the breeze full astern, and as if moved by a mysterious power, shot downward on the home stretch with all sails set. Each seemed "a thing of life," but to say they "walked the waters" would be tame, for "flying" would be a better name. The boats appeared to be all well managed, and were handled with great skill, though Capt. Douglas of the Artemisia made a very successful maneuver in sailing against the wind, keeping his boat square up, so that when the turning point was reached, he was a very short distance from the stake-boat while his strongest competitors, the Minerva and Mary M. Soule, were over a mile to leeward, so that in tacking the Artemisia made a great gain, and it became apparent that she stood an excellent chance to come out winner.

As the fleet passed down the homestretch of eight miles the sailing was magnificent, and the swelling sails, like the wings of birds, seemed to bear their burden onward with a speed more than that of the wind. Having tired her gun as the first boat, the Artemisia, crossed her bow, the Telfair also turned her prow toward Oysterville, preceded by the steam tug Astoria, which had come around from Astoria in the morning with a load of visitors. Two more vessels now actually joined in the race, the Telfair and Astoria, and finding they could not pass the yacht fleet, each tried to beat the other to their anchorage, and the Telfair succeeded in making it, to the delight of her passengers, though the tug gave her a close race.

But to return to the yachts. They got on the homestretch in the following order: Artemisia, Minerva, Mary M. Soule, Lib Smith, Serena, Mary V. Marion, Humming Bird. The trip home was the most exciting time in the regatta, and cheer after cheer went up from those on board the steamer and tug as the scene presented itself in any peculiarly closely contested aspect. As the Artemisia was the first to start down the homestretch, so she was first at the starting point, having gained about four minutes in point of time in the eight miles. The Minerva came second and the Mary M. Soule third. The time made by each boat was as follows, which, when considered with reference to the fact that sixteen miles of the twenty-four were made against the wind, was certainly very good sailing:

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Artemisia	2	52	16	Serena	2	59	28
Minerva	2	56	12	Mary V. Marion	3	03	48
Mary M. Soule	2	57	49	Humming Bird	3	26	08
Lib Smith	2	58	24

The boats were all of very nearly uniform size and model with the exception of the Humming Bird, she being scarce 20 feet of keel, while the others were, generally a little over 30 feet keel.

THE JUDGES AND AWARD.

The judges of the regatta were Messrs. J. A. Clark, J. Bullard and J. Q. A. Bowlby. Messrs. W. S. Riddell and Chas. A. M. Myers were chosen as time-keepers. The measurement of keels and sails having been made, the prizes were awarded as follows: First prize, cup valued at $40, to the Artemisia; second prize, silver cup, $30, to the Minerva, and third, silver cup, $20, to the Mary M. Soule. The award of the prizes, as well as the entire management of the regatta gave general satisfaction to the members of the club and all who witnessed the race. The occasion passed off most pleasantly, in fact, in all respects, and we opine that their sixth annual regatta will be an event of still greater interest as the members express an intention of making much more extensive preparations for that occasion, and a number of new boats are already in course of construction, or in contemplation, which will be of the most approved models for swiftness in sailing. To those who desire to witness interesting and exciting sport enjoy a splendid seaside, and in short, to make a regular seaside excursion, no better opportunity could be presented than that of attending the annual regatta of the Shoalwater Bay Club, as they are given just at the time when it is a real luxury to escape from the heat and dust of the city.

INCIDENTS OF THE TRIP, ETC.

A great many incidents of an amusing nature to those who went on the excursion, but to appreciate their interest one must have been a participant in, or a witness of them. Among the excursionists was a prominent banker, who became almost as expert at the business of opening oysters as he is at handling twenty dollar pieces and bonds. Another prominent citizen did not live on gas alone on the trip, but picked up the trade of separating bivalves with great readiness, as did the two sons of a well-known physician, and several others more or less distinguished in social and business circles in the city of Portland. To see these gentlemen surround a two-bushel sack of oysters in the shell, and watch the dexterity displayed in getting at the fish was amusing as well as instructive, and made one almost wish he was able to open an oyster saloon and hire them all. But the profits would be very limited, as they all seemed to have the ability to put every oyster taken out of his shell into their own. A well-known resident of Portland was also a full hand at the opening business and "rustled" an oyster out of his shell with the same agility with which he retrieves a wounded bird in a pigeon shooting match. A prominent representative of a Front street mercantile establishment was seldom absent from the oyster beds while at the bay, or the sacks while on board homeward-bound steamer. Gum boots were almost a necessity in getting from the steamer to Oysterville, and our mercantile friend had none with him, so he usually took off his shoes, rolled up his pants, and waded through, displaying a pair of lower limbs much better proportioned up and down than they were sidewise, but they carried him through the tide successfully every time, while an insurance agent and reporter, pro tem., for our evening contemporary, who could not boast of such length of limb was let into the briny deep where it came above his knees by a gallant son of the sea who undertook to carry him over. A minister was to return with us from Oysterville, and the ship waited so long for him to get his baggage aboard that we failed to reach the Columbia on Thursday evening before darkness hid the outer buoy, and so we were compelled to lay outside from 8 o'clock that evening until next morning. As night came on and Capt. Gardner saw it was best to wait till dawn, the ship's prow was turned seaward and the steam partially shut off. "What's this for?" inquired our gospel friend. "We are out for all night and paying the penalty of waiting for your blasted luggage, by jove," quickly replied our gallant Briton. With the excursion party was Capt. H., who claimed that he was master of the business of making boxes (and really does well at his trade), but that he knew still more of the art of capturing the deceitful clam and the festive crab. So he was appointed crab inspector and clam master general for the crowd. On the morning after we reached Oysterville our friend H. was out at daybreak with a sack, a crab net, pair of gum boots and blue drilling pants, for the purpose of laying in supplies. About 10 A. M. he returned, wet, hungry and "dry," having captured two razor clams (from an Indian woman) and one crab which the landlady refused to cook unless Capt. H. would furnish the pot, as it had been so long dead that it was likely to spoil the vessel in which it was cooked.

Several gentlemen of Portland, and Capt. Hays of the steamer California, all fine singers, furnished a great deal of good vocal music, there being no instruments on board. Capt. Hays, who does not often sing in public, has a fine falsetto voice and would excel in popular ballad singing. A fine singer from the regions of Puget Sound was at home among the clams of Shoalwater Bay, and the Oysterville ladies considered him the finest dancer in the party, though when he came on the floor with a lady from Bruceport, who weighs over 200, our clam-eating friend himself bringing down the scale at 235, the rest of the dancers generally withdrew for fear the floor would give away and let the whole party into the saloon below. By the way, speaking of dancing reminds us of

THE DANCING PARTY.

Given by the club in the evening of the 5th, which was numerously attended and greatly enjoyed by all present. Among the ladies in attendance we notice as particularly pleasing in their manners, style of dress, etc., Misses Elvira and Ella Crellin, of Oysterville; Misses Whitelaw, Huntington, Hustler and Brown, of Astoria, and Mesdames Jno. and Thos. Crellin, Guild, Riddell and Doane, of Shoalwater Bay; Mrs. Hustler, Brown, Stevens and Frenchard, of Astoria; and Misses Wass, Higgins and Gilman, and Mesdames Burrell, Gilman and others, of Portland. The festivities were kept up until an early hour in the morning, and all dispersed well satisfied with the manner in which everything passed off.

POETRY OF THE OCCASION.

The following, inspired by the muse, was flung off by one of the excursionists as we came up the river, entitled: A Rhyming Rhapsody upon these pleasant events, which happened not quite

"TEN THOUSAND MILES AWAY."

O! bright and cheerful was the day,
Our ship sailed swiftly, too;
The Telfair was her family name,
And Gardner's jolly crew;
Bold George and his particular friends,
Were there on pleasure bound,
And we steered away to a jolly place,
Not far from Puget Sound.

Chorus—Then blow ye winds yo-ho!
A sailing we will go,
And oysters catch in boats to match,
Not far from Puget Sound.

The bar was cleared, and we headed north
Till whales came into view,
Then we steered due east, and glad were they
Whose meals hove into view.
When the ship did roll, and their insides
Were turned round and round,
As we bore away to that jolly place,
Not far from Puget Sound.

The port was reached and all were glad,
Our inwards had been braced;
The boats were lowered, gum boots in store,
And George, with smiling face,
Said, "Pull, my men, the town's in view,
The sands are broad and shoal,
Our lady friends are waiting us,
And Oysterville's our goal."

But ere said goal was that way reached,
The boat was fast ashore;
And gum-boots then came into play,—
Barefooted ones did roar;
Those left behind, for "cod" did fish,
And sighed for "oysters" bivalves,
Fearing that fascinating George
Would "guile" them with his spells.

At twelve o'clock the gun was fired,
Our nerves were tautly strung,
Our ship was boarded from the shore
By ladies old and young.
The welkin rang with cheers lustily pasted—
We cheered them as they flew—
And each in turn did try to pick
The winner and her crew.

But time would fail to tell of all
The wonders that we saw;
How Artemisia won the gold,
And how Lib Smith wore straw;
How boots were sold and bets were laid
And won by a young man
Who scooped the crowd until his pants
With silver pieces ran.

At eve our fellows left for shore,
The hail their end and aim;
But when their wardrobes they did scan,
They blushed for very shame;
Their —— was soiled, their hair unkempt,
Their pants were worse for wear,
And when they did the mirror view,
They said "that's naught! I swear!"

The ball was rich in incidents,
Fit for a "Brat Harte's" pen;
The mosquitoes treated some catgut wild
By lusty soldier men;
The dancers pranced—nay, they did leap
And circled round and round,
Sakes! can't they foot it just a few
Not far from Puget Sound.

But balls and fetes must terminate,
As best of friends must part;
And homeward bow our ship is turned,
Though many a heavy heart
Was left that night in Oysterville
As the Telfair sailed away,
Came George and his gallant crew
No longer there could stay.

At two o'clock we left the bay,
Our hearts with joy were filled,
Before we reached the outer bay
Two coots reported killed;
We steered due south and went it strong
Astoria for to make,
We asked the captain, "can we fetch 'm"
He winked and answered "Wake."

Many incidents other than these recorded here went to make up the interest of the occasion. The entire excursion was pleasurable every way, and those going are duly grateful to Mr. Weidler for getting it up and going along, and to Capt. Gardiner, Purser Carney, Engineer Fox and Steward Hobin, for the exertions which they made to render it pleasant for all on board.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

Yesterday morning there were two unfortunates who helped to break the monotony of the police court, and cause a slight ripple upon its still waters. Robert Spencer, a dead drunk, but not dead broke, paid five dollars for his fun and went on his way, while Louis Sallunt, for the same offence, went below for three days.

PERSONAL.

THE LEGACY HUNTERS

It was Abigail Varley's three-score-tenth birthday She was a rich widow childless and with no known relatives save two gentle men cousins

Never were cousinly attachments more beautifully illustrated or curiously jealousy amusingly exemplified than in the daily walk and conversation of these two collateral kinsmen They bestowed so much affection on their common relative that they had none to waste between themselves

Both were several years younger than the lady, with a fair prospect according to the course of nature of surviving her and how to supplant each other in her will which at least, she had begun to talk seriously of making was the problem which at present engaged their attention

On the morning in question when Cousin Roger called to wish Cousin Abigail the usual many happy returns he was not a little chagrined to find Cousin Dick there before him However he presented his annual gift and went through his annual speech without missing a word and seeing Tabby the cousinly cat perched snugly on his rival's knee, by way of not being outdone in cousinly attention he took up Pompey, the cousinly poodle though dogs were his abomination

Well Cousin Abigail I hope your health continues good said Cousin Roger patting Pompey's head and glancing suspiciously at Cousin Dick, who he devoutly wished at Jericho

"No not so good latterly as it has been The fact is the old lady continued 'I have been thinking seriously of sending for Mr Parker, with a view of settling my worldly affairs without delay

"O there is no need of haste cousin broke in Dick 'you have many years before you yet' meantime adding what has possessed the old nanny to put it off so long?

Well, well, I suppose there's no hurry about it," said cousin Abigail

And yet, cousin Roger ventured to hint 'it's always well to be prepared, none of us can tell the minute or the hour you know'

And after all calling in a lawyer is not so serious a matter as calling in a doctor,' said cousin Dick, fastidiously

The conversation was interrupted by the entrance of a young and beautiful girl, at whom cousin Dick stared with a surprised and troubled look

'Pardon me, ma'am" she said, in a voice remarkably sweet and gentle "not knowing you were engaged I came to see if you wished me, as usual to read to you to-day'

'Presently, dear,' Mrs Varley answered in a tone that plainly limited her visitors would not be pressed to stay if they offered to go

After an awkward pause the two cousins took their departure together

'Who is that girl?' inquired Roger, as soon as they had reached the street

'Is our angel wife' said cousin Dick and stopping, he whispered something in his companion's ear, at which the latter started suddenly.

'Good heaven' the resemblance is certainly striking But what is to be done? Do you think the old—cousin Abigail, I mean—suspects anything?'

'Not yet, I think but no time is to be lost, I have a plan which it would be well for us to talk over together"

The two lingered rapidly along

Mrs Varley had occasionally found time hang heavily on her hands, and so had adver tised for a person to fill the post of 'companion' to an aged lady It was thus that Hester Darling had become an inmate of the house

At as early an hour as was seemly on the morning following that on which we introduced them to the reader, Roger and Dick again presented themselves before their cousin

We have thought it our duty cousin—began Dick

'Our bounden duty," put in Roger

'Our painful as it is imperative, Dick continued

To put you on your guard, ma'am' Roger added

'Against a deceitful and designing person,' exclaimed Dick

Who is no better than she should be," shouted Roger, indignantly

'Upon my word, cousins I do not comprehend a syllable you have uttered' said Mrs Varley, nor shall I be likely to if you both keep talking at once Come, Dick, you seem the least excited what is the meaning of all this?

'What means may I venture to ask,' said Dick, did you take to ascertain the character and antecedents of the young woman at present sheltered beneath your roof?

'Why none replied the good old lady Her young and truthful face was recommendation enough on which to give her a trial

"We have ascertained her to be a most abandoned creature" proceeded Dick 'and have deemed it proper at once to apprise you of the discovery Should she deny the accusation we are prepared with abundant proofs"

And the two cousins took their leave with an air of exalted virtue

Mrs Varley was a lady of the strictest propriety, and severest morals Much as she pitied the poor and friendless girl, she must be promptly freed from this foul and dreadful charge, or cross her threshold never to return

She went directly to Hester's chamber

'You must tell me your past history, child,' said Mrs Varley in a determined but not unkindly tone

O, madam, I pray you pardon me but I cannot tell it.

Then it has been one of shame and guilt?'

For a time of shame, madame," answered the young girl with flushed cheek but never of guilt.

What was it that caused Mrs Varley to start so suddenly, and stagger like fainting, to a seat at Hester's dressing table?

Who—whose likeness is that" she exclaimed, in a scarcely articulate voice, pointing to an open miniature on the table

My mother's,' Hester answered

Then you are Florence Marvin's child?"

That was indeed my mother's name?

More—you are the daughter of my only brother, George Heywood, for Florence Marvin was his wife

With a stifled cry she who had believed herself alone and friendless in the world fell on her kinswoman's neck and wept tears of mingled gladness and sorrow

Her story which Hester had refused to confide to a stranger's ears, she now willingly imparted to one from whom she felt she had no longer a right to withhold it

That her brother had married in opposition to her father's wishes, and had been disinherited in consequence; was already known to Abigail Varley but what distant spot he had selected for his home and what had befallen him there she had never learned

The story was sad enough

After a few years, toilsome but not unhappy years—for they were spent in loved society of his wife and child—a dire calamity had fallen upon George Heywood He came under suspicion of a fearful crime A network of circumstances too intricate for man's wit to disentangle environed him, and he was condemned to die The stern judgment was carried into effect and the executed murderer's widow sought contentment for herself and child in a change of places and name Long long years afterwards the truth was discovered but the judicial murder had passed among the things irrevocable The poor widow died at last—broken hearted but with one consolation—she had lived to see her husband's innocence vindicated

And this my poor child is the shame of which you spoke"

My life has known no other '

Not many days after Hester was sent to one of the first seminaries in the land for she had yet time enough to avail herself of opportunities of culture hitherto beyond her reach Her aunt and she kept their own counsel Cousins Roger and Dick only knew that the object of their solicitude had disappeared, and probably congratulated themselves on the success of their virtuous stratagem

After a time Mr Parker cousin Abigail's lawyer, was sent for, and after that the good old woman seemed wonderfully revived in spirits At her next birthday, the prospect of many happy returns produced anything but a happy effect upon the two expectant cousins who began to think that after all the life tables might be infallible But her time came at last and within a decent period after the sad event cousins Roger and Dick were duly summoned to attend the reading of Abigail Varley's will

They were a good deal startled at the sight of their old enemy the strange girl

Poor Bobbs as if seeking consolation in her bereavement leaped upon the knee of her old friend Dick who stroked her back pathetically but a little nervously Pompey who to his many more philosophical virtues stretched himself out for a snooze at the feet of Roger

Mr Parker drawing from his pocket the document proceeded to read it The introduction was long and formal But hark there's something coming now

To my cousin Richard Figgins—

Richard looked at Roger in triumph

"I give and bequeath—

You could have heard both their hearts beat

In consideration of the paternal love and affection which I have observed between them—

Dick looked puzzled

My favorite cat Tabby

Dick gave Tabby a furious stroke the wrong way

And no more of my estate

With a fling that betokened almost emphatic renunciation of the legacy Tabby was sent mewing and spitting to the further end of the room

To my cousin Roger Smith—

Julius Roger's turn to triumph

In consideration of the like natural love and affection—

Roger began to feel suspicious

I give and bequeath my dog Pompey and one more of my estate.

With a violent kick Pompey was sent spinning after the cat and the fear of her which I so long kept the peace between them being no longer before their eyes the pent up enmity of years found vent in an uproarous fight in the midst of which the voice of the old lawyer was almost drowned but the words, rest and residue of my estate—peace Hester Heywood, were sufficiently audible and cousins Dick and Roger stayed to hear no more

As will be seen by our quotations above gold is again advancing in New York. The advance in the face of a large export demand of breadstuffs causes considerable speculation At this distance from the field of operations we are unable to account for it. The high premium reached by gold a month or six weeks ago was brought about by a speculative movement heavy shipments abroad and the taking out of the country a very large sum by persons leaving the East to travel during the summer in Europe The speculative movement was induced by our exports falling off in value something on an average of about $9 000 000 per month for the months past during the current fiscal year The movement was also aided by high rates of interest abroad and very low rates in the East, which induced many capitalists abroad to withdraw their funds for investment at home And then again failures in England called for cancelling matured and maturing obligations by New York importers in that country hard to such causes exist as to bring about an advance Government has been selling gold and also calling in bonds and also paying out coin for interest maturing The exports are very large as witnessed in the great demand for tonnage East The rates of interest in England are again low having been reduced steadily from 4 per cent until they now touch 2½ per cent.
